

DC Domestic Workers Bill of Rights Organizational Support Letter

The undersigned organizations are proud to call on the DC Council to pass a Domestic Workers Bill of Rights.

Over 9,000 domestic workers provide essential care in Washington DC. They care for our children, aging relatives and loved ones with disabilities, and they keep our homes clean and organized. These women make the work of thousands of other people possible, yet it is some of the most invisible and undervalued work in our economy.

Domestic work in Washington DC is overwhelmingly done by women of color. 92% of domestic workers working in the District are women, 91% are people of color and 71% are immigrants. The vulnerabilities that domestic workers face due to their gender, race and immigration status are compounded by the isolated nature of domestic work in private homes.

Nannies, house cleaners, and home care workers have historically been excluded from basic labor protections. Without these protections, many domestic workers tolerate low or no pay, sexual harassment, and other exploitative workplace conditions. Even when domestic workers do have legal rights and protections, they often face systemic barriers that prevent them from exercising their rights.

Right here in Washington DC, domestic workers are the only group of workers excluded from DC's Human Rights Act. This exclusion stems from the legacy of slavery and antiquated ideas about race, gender, and the women of color who have historically performed domestic work. The exclusion from DC's Human Rights Act is a reflection of federal law that became part of DC's law and was never changed. It is long past time to end this racist exclusion.

A Domestic Workers Bill of Rights in Washington DC would include domestic workers in protections against employment discrimination and in DC's local occupational health and safety law. It would require written agreements between domestic workers and those that hire them, to ensure workers know their rights and employers are aware of their responsibilities, and it would establish an outreach and education program in partnership with community based organizations to provide education and training on labor standards in the industry.

Care jobs are on track to be the fastest growing workforce in the United States as more and more people continue to age. This bill is an important step toward shining a light on one of the most critical workforces in our country and preparing ourselves for the future of work. The DC Domestic Workers Bill of Rights would help ensure that every nanny, housecleaner and home care worker in the District can work in safety and with dignity.

Together, we can achieve a vision for domestic workers that will fundamentally change the way we value the work of women, especially women of color. That is why we are rallying together to support the DC Domestic Workers Bill of Rights that sets a vision for our shared future where we value and respect all working people, regardless of what they do or where they work. Change starts in our homes.

Sincerely,
